The latest method of diagnosing autism by determining the Energy Frequency Patterns that is based on the cuttingedge science of Applied Energy Medicine is transforming the way autism is being diagnosed and treated today. And the method is the Energy Based Assessment and Report.

This cuttingedge scientific method is a game changer in not only the accurate diagnosis of autism that is specific and Unique to each individual, but also has a Predictive Value about the recovery timeline that is also specific and unique to each child/person with autism and their families.

Right now there are no medical tests to diagnose autism. The current conventional method of diagnosis is mainly based on behavior and development assessment. With this approach the earliest age at which the diagnosis of autism can be made is 18 months, but most children are diagnosed much later, between two and 5 years of age and this causes delay in starting early interventions that could help the child.

What is generally understood about the key components that determine the labelling of a person/child as having autism or ASD. Autism Spectrum Disorder includes the following:

- Developmental disability
- Social challenges
- Challenges in communication
- Behavioral challenges

One of the main aspects of the “developmental disability” component that is completely missed in the current approach to the diagnosis of autism is the ability to identify this developmental disability risk right in the womb of the mother, during pregnancy itself. The Energy Assessment method addresses this major aspect in autism diagnosis and thus can not only help in the diagnosis, but also in the prevention of the limiting symptoms of autism manifesting in the child by allowing for early intervention with methods based on Applied Energy Medicine, while in the womb of the mother itself. And this intervention is with the noninvasive method of Intent Healing (™), which is based on the cuttingedge sciences of Applied Energy Medicine and Applied Intentional Epigenetics.

Each Individual on the autism spectrum is Unique. What determines this “Uniqueness”?

It is the Energy SIGNATURE Frequency of each individual. Therefore it makes perfect sense to use the Energy Assessment of the individual to determine whether that person has autism or not.

It also helps in the reassessment of the individuals to know how much progress they have made with respect to being free from their limiting symptoms once the healing intervention with Intent Healing (™) is started.

The Revolutionary Energy Assessment method of diagnosing Autism/ASD:

The science behind this method of assessment is the discovery that everything in the Universe is made of Energy. And therefore, it is possible to determine the energy frequencies of the developing fetus and later the child / individual of any age and predict and confirm if the fetus and/or the child/individual has autism or not.

This is done with Intent Healing (™), which is a form of Applied Energy Medicine. The technique involves remote sensing of the energy patterns of the fetus and/or the child/individual with either the risk for suffering from the limiting symptoms of autism or with actual symptoms of autism, as the case may be.

This is done over a period of two days and two nights and the report of the energy pattern is given to the parents and/or the person seeking this assessment.

Benefits of the Energy Assessment method that is not present in the conventional form of diagnosing Autism/ASD:

- A Fool Proof scientific method of assessment that is highly Specific and Unique for each individual
- Gives absolute CLARITY on what the Cause of the symptoms in the autistic person is that is unique to that individual and how this is directly connected with that person's Unique Signature Frequency (This is the REAL reason why each person on the spectrum is totally Unique). Addressing this is what brings about the healing of the symptoms in the autistic person applying the energy based method Intent Healing (™)
- Categorization such as mild, moderate and severe autism based on the Extent of the Energy Disturbance in the individual
- Prediction based on the Energy Pattern as to “WHEN” all the limiting symptoms would disappear in the child/person struggling with autism
- Guidance on which type or form of intervention is likely to work and/or is working for each child/person with autism, based on the Energy Compatibility assessment of specific forms of intervention with the energy patterns of the child/individual
- Energy Compatibility between the diet and supplements being given/taken by the person/child with autism and the Energy Frequency of the autistic person.
- Has predictive value in diagnosing and predicting probability of delivering an autistic child by assessing the fetus during pregnancy itself and increases the chances of correcting the energy disturbances during pregnancy itself

- Correction is done with Intent Healing™ which is based on the science of Applied Energy Medicine and Applied Intentional Epigenetics
- Helps in diagnosing autism in the parents, especially in the mother even if not diagnosed earlier

In conclusion, this revolutionary new scientific method of diagnosing autism based on the Energy Frequency Pattern is paving way for the foolproof method of diagnosing autism as early as during pregnancy itself, extending onto older children and adults on the spectrum. Thus facilitating healing from the limiting symptoms of autism with interventional methods such as Intent Healing™, that is showing results from day one.
